

I suggested that the congress of the debated states like Michigan must exercise their responsibility to protect their citizens by choosing the delegates for the president and selecting the US congress.

It is simple most of these states did not follow the United States Constitution by using the state law created by the state congress in their state.

Because the states violated the United States Constitution during this election for United States candidates the state congress has the responsibility and right to determine the out come of the race. (especially sense these states have run so much interference that there is no analytical solution but to have the state congress determine the winner.)

The states had no legal right to mess up the election laws and therefore have no legal right in interfering with what the state congress decides. The only consideration is solely the United States Supreme Court, and that is an issue that will be done no mater what the state congress does.

The United States Supreme Court has only one consideration, That is why the founding fathers did create the constitution this way in the first place. They did it that way for exactly the situation we are in right now. We had states with congresses that would not change the law. They were looking after the interest of their citizens. The state congress is the second best indicator of what the citizens in our country wants. Because these outlaw states destroyed the best way to determine the outcome of an election, that is the best way to serve the citizens, the only choice left is to have the state congress in each state determine the out come of the races.

So, you see the only problem that the citizens have right now is the hesitation of there state congress performing their duty under the direction of the United States Constitution.

The fact that some of the state candidates were not dealt with legally is a consideration for the states to answer. In Michigan these statewide races were not above the board either and maybe the states can take the time to rerun their elections properly in their troubled areas.

So in limiting the conversation just to federal elections for now the citizens of the troubled states need their state congress to choose how to fix their states mess. Again the only thing that can change their decision is the United States Supreme Court because they need to uphold our United States Constitution.

This is why I said it is time for the state congress to act.

Lets keep going,
